

The Lower Adirondack Regional Center for History

The first television was demonstrated 100 years ago this year. The impact of this little box in the corner of the living room — on every aspect of our daily lives was, and still is, tremendous. Perhaps most important has been its influence on our understanding of history. Join us for a look at how television created a new understanding of historic events.

Programs are held in the lower-level program room at the Hancock House Museum and are free to attend, unless otherwise noted. Donations are appreciated. Reservations are encouraged, and can be made by calling 518-585-7868 or via e-mail to: larchny@bridgepoint1.com
